Introduction

An educational trip to Shivsagar & Dibrugarh was organised by the CSR department for the students of class XI and XII. . 27 Students from our school started on 26th September and returned on 29th September. Our main motive was to visit the Historic places Dibrugarh & Sivasagar. We learnt many things about the Ahom's Dynasty. We were accompanied by Mr.Kinshuk Bora, from CSR team and Mr.Swapnil Sarma, sports teacher of our school.

Bridge over Dikhow River

The Iron lift bridge was constructed in 1935. It is similar to The Pamban Bridge of Tamil Nadu, India.

The Talatal Ghar(kareng Ghar)

- The Talatal Ghar is the largest of the monuments built by the Ahom dynasty.
- Swargadeo Rudra Singha shifted the capital of the Ahom kingdom from Garhgaon to Rangpur in 1702-03 and it remained so for almost a century.
- It is located in the western part of Sivasagar. The earliest constructions were commissioned by Swargadeo Rudra Singha in 1698.
- Rangpur was the last capital of the Ahom kingdom and served as its military-station.
- It was initially built as an army base.
- It's houses two secret tunnels, and three floors below ground level which were used as exit routes during the Ahom conflicts with other kingdoms.
- TSwargadeo Rajeswar Singha added the three floors below ground, which make up the Talatal Ghar.
- This is made of brick and an indigenous type of cement (a mixture of Bora Chaul—a sticky variety of rice grain—eggs of swan, etc.).

- One, about 3 kilometres in length, connected the Talatal Ghar to the Dikhow River, while the other, 16 kilometres long, led to the Garhgaon Palace, and was used as an escape route in case of an enemy attack.
- From east to west, several rooms run along a long corridor and seems that it is never ending but it is divided into 3 parts and each part contains 7 corridors.
- An octagonal room on the northern wing which once served as the Puja Ghar (prayer house).
- An isolated room stands in the south which is believed to have been used by the queen during her confinement.
- There are stairs leading up to the terrace.
- The Ahom's soldier's training system is quite similar to the France soldier's system which means it was compulsory for soldiers to take three months training in one year, here.
- The secret tunnels were closed after 1826, when a Britisher officer came named Captain Martain and he sent his soldiers inside the tunnel and they never returned and he had waited for them for one week in the same place.
- Client-Rajeshwar Singha
- Architect-Ghanashyam

Joysagar

It was made by the Ahom king Swargadeo Rudra Singha, in the memory of his mother Joymati in the year 1697.

The Rang Ghar

- The Rang Ghar meaning is "House of joy".
- The Rang Ghar is a two-storeyed building which once served as the royal sports-pavilion where Ahom kings and nobles were spectators at games like buffalo fights and other sports at Rupahi Pathar.
- It was first constructed during the reign of Swargadeo Rudra Singha with bamboo and wood. It was later rebuilt with brick by Swargadeo Pramatta Singha in AD 1744-1751.

Sivasagar Sivadol

- Siva dol is a group of structures comprising three Hindu temples of Sivadol, Vishnudol and Devidol shrines, and a museum.
- These are located on the banks of the Sivasagar ("the ocean of the god Shiva") tank, also known as the Borpukhuri tank.
- The tank was constructed between 1731 and 1738 and the temples were built in 1734 by Bar Raja Ambika, queen of Ahom king Swargadeo Siva Singha (1714-1744).
- The Sivadol is the highest temple of Assam of 104 feet and the perimeter is 195 feet at the base.
- It is crowned with an 8-foot high golden-dome.
- It is also the tallest Shiva temple tower in India.
- The Sivasagar tank was built by constructing embankments and the water level thus created in the lake remains above the adjoining ground level.
- It is said that the lake water remains stable throughout the year without any fluctuations even during the monsoon months.

The Kareng Ghar

- Kareng ("royal palace"), also known as The Garhgaon Palace, is located in Garhgaon 15 kilometres from Sivasagar, Assam, India.
- Of all Ahom ruins, the Kareng Ghar is one of the grandest examples of Ahom architecture.
- From east to west, several rooms run along a long corridor; and from north to south are smaller wings.
- The ground floor served as stables, storerooms, and servants' quarters.
- The royal apartments were on the upper storey, of which only a few rooms now remain, close to an octagonal room on the northern wing which once served as the Puja Ghar (prayer house). An isolated room stands on the south which is believed to have been used by the queen during her confinement.

The Charaideo Maidams

A maidam is a tumulus of the royalty and aristocracy of the medieval Ahom Kingdom (1228-1826) in Assam. The royal maidams are found exclusively at Charaideo; whereas other maidams are found scattered in the region between Jorhat and Dibrugarh towns. Structurally, a maidam consists of vaults with one or more chambers. The vaults have a domical superstructure that is covered by a hemispherical earthen mound that rises high above the ground with an open pavilion at the peak called chow chali. An octagonal dwarf wall encloses the entire maidam.

Burial is the predominant funeral rite of the Tai people, to which the Ahom people originally belonged. This is opposed to the Hindu system of cremation. After the Ahom kings adopted Hinduism, they chose to bury the ashes after cremation.

The structural construction and the process of royal burials are explained in historical documents called Chang-Rung Phukanor Buranji, which detail even the articles that were buried. Later excavations under the Archaeological Survey of India found some of the maidams previously defiled, with the articles mentioned in the Buranji missing.

Many of the maidams were excavated and looted, most famously under the Mughal general Mir Jumla who had occupied Garhgaon briefly in the 17th century, and under the British after 1826.

Boat safari and Bogibeel bridge

The Bogibeel Bridge is a combined road and rail bridge over the Brahmaputra River in the northeastern Indian state of Assam between Dhemaji district and Dibrugarh district, which was started in the year 2002 and took a total of 200 months to complete. Bogibeel river bridge is the longest rail-cum-road bridge in India, measuring 4.94 kilometres over the Brahmaputra river. As it is situated in an earthquake-prone area it is India's first bridge to have fully welded steel-concrete support beams that can withstand earthquakes of magnitudes up to 7 on the Richter scale. It is Asia's second longest rail-cum-road bridge and has a serviceable period of around 120 years.

It is the 5th longest bridge in India after Bhupen Hazarika Setu, Dibang River Bridge, Mahatma Gandhi Setu and Bandra-Worli Sea Link. The bridge was constructed by a consortium of construction companies headed by Hindustan Construction Company. The bridge has a double rail line on the lower deck and a three lane road on the upper deck. It was inaugurated by Prime Minister Narendra Modi on 25 December 2018 on the occasion of Good Governance Day.

Dibrugarh University

Dibrugarh University is a collegiate public state university in the Indian state of Assam. It is located at Dibrugarh, Assam, India. It was set up in 1965 under the provisions of the Dibrugarh University Act, 1965 enacted by the Assam Legislative Assembly. The Dibrugarh University Campus is located at Rajabheta, Dibrugarh city and is spread over an area of 500 acres. The NH15 (old NH37) bisects the main campus from the other, the latter primarily comprising teacher's and officer's residence.

The Dibrugarh district is well known for its vast mineral resources (including oil, natural gas and coal), flora and fauna and many tea plantations. The diverse tribes with their distinct dialects, customs, traditions and culture make this area attractive to students of anthropology and sociology, art and culture.
